Earning a Master's degree in Education from Marquette in 1952, Ernie joined the college faculty. There, in addition to teaching during the academic year, he held the role of director of summer school sessions from 1953 until 1970. In 1955, he earned a Doctorate in Education from Loyola in Chicago, and then became the chairman of the education department at the college. From 1957 to 1960, he was also the director of admissions, and in '62, the director of advanced placement. Beginning in 1980, he headed the college's Early Childhood Conference.
